Experiments being made by educators over the country with all the year round public school method indicate conclusively that the method is a success and will doubtless be adopted in this country. It has been proven that the all year plan not only hastens the progress of children in their studies without injuring their health, but also increasing the income of teachers without over working them.

Every day of the year an average of 142 babies are born in Wisconsin, according to a report issued by the state board of health. Deaths of children under one year of age average fifteen per day. The report states that 10.5 per cent of the children born each year die before reaching the age of one year. The board declares that infant mortality is the subject of serious consideration.

A district court judge of one of Minnesota's northern counties has inaugurated a somewhat new, if not novel, method of dispensing the law. He committed a penitentiary sentence hanging over the head of a half-confessed woodsman on a charge of forgery to release on probation with the promise that the culprit would never touch another drop of liquor, should have no associates, and stick to the straight and narrow path by continuing permanently at the employment the court had secured him in the lumber camps of northern Minnesota. The experiment will be watched with much interest and if successful may be more commonly used in similar cases where the culprit is not a hardened criminal.

Unless certain damaging diseases are controlled Wisconsin's great cabbage industry will, before many years, experts believe, be a thing of the past. Club Root, according to a writer in the Wisconsin Horticulture, is fast gaining a foothold in the cabbage-raising sections of the state, and wherever found has done a vast amount of damage to the roots of young cabbage plants. It causes large galls or enlargements on the roots and greatly weakens the plant, sometimes causing death or practically stunting it. A mold which gains entrance to the roots of the young seedlings in the seed bed or field. The prevention of this disease is the application of lime to the soil. For it has been found that club root thrives best in acid soil. The rotation of crops, too, does much to prevent its development and only the purest and cleanest of seed should be used. Growers are cooperating with experts in developing resistant types of cabbage, which will be less subject to this and other diseases.

A Little Look Backward.
(The World's Work)

Five years ago individuals owned and directed nearly all of the country's greatest public servants the railroads. There is no one in the railroad now with such autocratic powers—for good and for evil—as Edward H. Harriman and J. J. Hill then exercised. Mr. Hill has retired. Mr. Harriman is dead. Even the great combination which he formed has been outlawed by the United States Supreme Court. The Sherman law has proved itself effective again in dissolving monopolies and doing it without damaging any real values. The work of Mr. Harriman's genius in improving his roads and their credit has not been undone. His work in making a combination easily capable of resisting trade against public interest has been undone. Five years ago the Standard Oil company seemed invincible as a practical monopoly. Its monopolistic power has been reduced—without reducing its prosperity—and the way has been opened for the other oil companies to do business. This was done by law and not "bribe business." Five years ago secret campaign funds were still a corrupting influence in politics. The new laws and the lessons of the Clapp committee will end that.

Toritors written secretly by a few people to insult themselves at the public expense are in a fair way to be knocked out when the special session of congress meets in April. The new freedom of business which Governor Wilson preached may be helped by such a bill as that which Senator Williams has before the upper house of congress.

The idea is this: The only rights which a corporation has are those which the state gives it when it grants its charter. It is proper enough for Maine or Delaware to give corporations any power they choose to use in Maine or Delaware, but it is another matter for such states to create corporations with predatory powers to prey upon the rest of the country. Congress has the power to regulate commerce between the states and, therefore, corporations engaged in such commerce. The underlying scheme of Senator Williams' bill is to bar from interstate trade corporations whose charters give them the power to break the common law against the restraint of trade.

In this there is no destruction of real values, no interruption to business more than a recognition which business undertakes with little trouble when it seems profitable. It is a legal and sane way toward a greater freedom, toward more and better business. The signs are pointing toward better times and we are going faster than most of us realize.

Not Knocking.
"No pardon," said the agent, as Mr. Dodger, who had been called to the door, stepped out. "But I would not knock if Mr. Dodger, your next neighbor, is good pay." "How do you like it?" asked Mr. Grouch. "All I want is to see that he has four times as much as I still owe for."

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON

Clyde H. Tavenor Writes of Doings at The National Capitol.

Take the tariff off meat and sugar and place a tax on incomes. This promises to be a feature of the legislative program of the Democratic House before the Ways and Means committee indicated that means would be placed on the free list as well as sugar. An income tax to make up for the loss of revenue from the tax on sugar and meat will soon come into existence as a result of the ratification of the proposal to amend the constitution. The removal of the tax on meat and sugar will mean quite a saving to the consumers. The wholesale price of standard granulated sugar averages two cents a pound in London, where there is no tax on sugar, whereas in New York the cables show that in New York transportation has been paid across the Atlantic being sold on the block in London for two cents a pound less than in New York.

Naturally the sugar trust and the beef trust will not approve a policy of free sugar and free meat, but the sugar trust and the beef trust is not in the saddle in Washington as heretofore.

Hon. James T. Lloyd has let it be known among his friends that he will not stand for re-election to the chairmanship of the National Democratic Congressional Committee. Mr. Lloyd has served as chairman of this important committee for six years, which is longer than any Democrat has ever held the position.

When Mr. Lloyd, who comes from the First Missouri district and has long been one of the Democratic leaders of the House, first took hold of the chairmanship of the congressional committee the Republicans were in power in both branches of Congress and seemed likely to be for many years to come. Mr. Lloyd in the House had a close cooperation with the Democratic candidates for Congress that was a little more systematic and effective than any policy that had ever been worked out before. Then he built up one of the largest Democratic news syndicates in the country, which had never been attempted before by the Congressional committee.

Mr. Lloyd believed it was important that the people be kept informed of what was going on in Washington, and he launched a news bureau to give the people the news from a Democratic viewpoint, not only during campaigns, but all the time. Ever since Mr. Lloyd has been chairman of the Congressional committee the country Democratic newspapers have been furnished with a weekly letter of Democratic news from Washington. The publication of these articles has been of the greatest help to the congressional candidates. Mr. Lloyd has also originated a statistical bureau, which has gathered data for the newspaper letters as well as the Congressional candidates. Mr. Lloyd has devoted the greatest part of his time and energy to his work, and feels the time has come now that the Democrats are in the ascendancy, for some good man to step and take his place.

Better Farm Homes.
As is the home, so is the nation. That is not merely a maxim, it is a truism as old as civilization, for human development has always rested upon the home and the home life. Therefore the efforts of the Wisconsin Advancement association to better the farm homes of Wisconsin will not only be watched with interest but will receive the sympathy and should receive the support of the entire state.

It is the plan of this association to conduct a campaign of education through the state for the purpose of bettering the home buildings and living conditions on the farms. This, naturally, will apply more greatly to the new settlers. Home conditions and possibilities on the farm have changed materially and for the better in recent years. The development of modern conveniences—electric light and power from wind or gasoline power, heating and plumbing equipments, water service in the buildings, postal delivery, the parcel post, the telephone, better roads, traveling libraries, agricultural college work, improved machinery and tools for the rest of it—have made farm life more attractive and more profitable. It only remains for the betterment of these improvements to reach into the homes of all the farmers to bring about the betterment the association seeks to expand. To that is to be added the construction of attractive, livable, well located home buildings. The presentation of ideas and plans for these is a part of the campaign.

Farm productivity has been notably advanced during the past decade. If now the home life is advanced to the highest point of possibility, Wisconsin will be the gainer.

Destroying Sparrows.
Where English sparrows are a pest take one-eighth ounce strychnine and dissolve in one quart hot water, then add three quarts of cracked corn. Let stand four hours, stirring every few minutes, so corn will swell and take up solution, then spread out on oilcloth. Then put under stove and stir often and when nearly dry add one quart of fine corn meal, so as to make an outside coating to the cracked corn, and then let thoroughly dry, says Farm and Home. Now you are ready for business. Take some chaff from barn or horse stable and scatter in some convenient place from barn and feed sparrows some of the good cracked corn two or three days, then some bristly, cold morning skip, and the next morning feed them your poisoned corn. Some people will say you will kill your cat or your dog. No, you can eat enough poisoned sparrows to kill them as the amount the sparrows eat is very small, and spring rains will dispose of balance, so many men use it on beans in barn.

Office Hours.
Living in a very friendly neighborhood, I found that often during the week I was delayed in my work by a "back-door" visit or a lengthy telephone call. Accordingly I proposed to several that we adopt "office hours" for our work and permit no interruption during those hours, writes a contributor to Harper's Bazar. The neighbors saw the wisdom of this plan and we have followed it with very gratifying economy of strength and time.

COMMISSIONERS TO MEET.

Second Annual Road School to be Held at Madison on February 18.

The Second Annual Road School of the Wisconsin Highway Commission will be held at the Public Library, Madison, February 18-19 inclusive. The men who will participate in the program are practical road builders, and have had the benefit of one year's experience in constructing highways under the direction of the Wisconsin Highway Commission. This school will give the second annual road school special educational value, bringing together as it will the combined experience and knowledge of the men who have built roads in every part of the state.

Arrangements have been made for exhibitions of moving pictures showing the construction of roads, and a discussion of this important subject by Mr. J. K. Kuehling, Highway Commissioner of Milwaukee County, where the bulk of this work was done in 1912. There will also be an exhibition of moving pictures by brick manufacturers showing the construction of brick pavements. Every phase of road work in every part of the state will be discussed.

The use of explosives in quarrying and road construction will be given by V. M. Weeks, of the Du Pont Powder Company.

The discussion of such questions as "Shall Road Work Be Done by Contract or under the Day Labor System," "Labor Supply and Prices," "Boarding Stations," and "The Highway Commission," are a few of the practical subjects to be discussed, and the sessions cannot fail to be instructive to every man interested in the scientific construction of highways in Wisconsin.

There will be an exhibition of road machinery and of surveying instruments by the various manufacturers, so that purchasing committees will have an opportunity to meet the representatives of these firms who will explain the merits of their machines, rollers, graders, crushers, and other machinery used in road construction.

The road school will be in session four days, and bringing together as it does all of the staff of road and bridge engineers of the Wisconsin Highway Commission the county highway commissioners and the various manufacturers of road machinery, it will afford the greatest opportunity for gathering information and instruction, as well as getting acquainted with all the forces at work in building better roads under the new state aid law in Wisconsin. All persons interested in the good road movement are cordially invited to attend.

The Tuberculin Test.
(Merrill Herald.)

It is amusing to hear the cry of the graduate veterinarian and others who have been permitted to practice in this state over the license granted to certain others who have been taught at the agricultural experiment station how to apply the tuberculin test. It is the cry of the practicing veterinarian that nobody is competent except themselves and that they should be allowed to do all the testing and charge such prices as they see fit. The veterinarians take exception to the rules of the live stock sanitary board and points out that the federal live stock sanitary board is against our state department with reference to this, but we know that the live stock sanitary board of this state is showing conclusively that the federal live stock sanitary board's opposition to them comes from other sources entirely and is a mere matter of petty malice on the part of the federal authorities.

The application of the tuberculin test as taught by the agricultural experiment station can be given with just as good results as can possibly be obtained by any veterinarian and the very fact of the unreasonable charges made in some parts of the state by the veterinarians for making his test has put the tuberculin test into bad standing with the farming community because it is almost impossible for them to have their tested at such an extortionate rate.

If a lay is to be passed so that only a veterinarian can make this test then we also suggest that the fee to be charged to be charged so that they will be within the realm of reasonableness and where the farmer can have the test made when he desires without paying him. We await the action of the legislature in this matter with considerable interest as the whole matter will be thrashed out and we trust that a proper adjustment of the matter will be reached.

Railway Business for November.

The high side of business in the United States continues to be reflected in the railway statistics compiled by the Bureau of Railway Economics from the reports of the railways to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The returns for last November show an increase over November of the previous year, but do not maintain the ratio of increase displayed by the month of October; while operating revenues increased $122 per mile of line for the month, operating expenses increased $74, and net revenue only $48. Total gross revenue for the previous November, amounting to $46 per mile of line, operating income averaged $12.13 per mile for each day in November, an amount greater by $1.63 than for November, 1911. This is the entire amount available to the railways for rentals, interest on bonds, appropriations, and dividends.

For the five months of the fiscal year the net operating revenue per mile of line of the eastern railways, compared with the corresponding months of the previous year, increased 9.3 per cent; that of the western railways increased 15.8 per cent, while that of the railways of the south increased less than one-tenth of 1 per cent. For the eleven months of the calendar year the net operating revenue per mile of line of the eastern railways, compared with the corresponding months of the previous year, increased 4.8 per cent; that of the western railways increased 7.4 per cent, while that of the railways of the south shows a decrease of 4.5 per cent.

End of a Noted Folly.
The monocle has long since been out of fashion in England, and is soon to be dropped from Paris, which has been its last stronghold. It was invented by a Dutch dandy, and its evil effects upon the eye were at once noted by oculists. The monocle first appeared at the congress of Vienna in 1814, when it was worn by its inventor. One folly, at least, has but only about a century of life.

THE POOR MAN'S FRIEND.

Eight Goats Can Be Kept at the Cost of One Cow.

The goat has been appropriately termed "the poor man's cow," and for good reason. A single goat could be found to express the position of the useful creature among our domestic animals. Such statistics as have been kept in Europe show that the milk goat is prized more highly there than in America, says an expert in Farm and Home. Spain, according to the latest report, has 3,500,000 goats. France almost 2,000,000; Prussia, 1,500,000; Italy, nearly 2,000,000; and so on throughout the other European countries.

In feeding any kind of milk stock there is this question to be considered—what description of food will produce the largest return in milk? According to carefully conducted experiments made some years ago in Germany to ascertain the influence of different foods on the quality and quantity of milk, in so far as the relative proportions of its constituents are concerned, the milk is in no way altered by any particular diet, but depends on the breed and peculiarity of the individual animal. The quality, however, may be affected by the nature and character of the nourishment taken.

Goats can be tethered out, being secured by a stout dog collar to which is attached a chain or rope. A tethering pin about 18 inches long with a ring in the end will answer the purpose to a nicety. They should be moved at least once a day. They are very fond of wild berries, woods, blackberry bush clippings, in fact anything of that nature.

In winter they should be stall fed. At each meal for one milch goat give one pint of a mixture of one part crushed oats and two parts beans, with one pint clover chaff added occasionally. Green food, as much as they will eat night and morning of mangels, etc., another cow and bran. Mid-day, roots or cabbage leaves, bread, biscuits or anything they fancy for a change. Evening, hay, oats, corn, bran, etc., about 6 o'clock.

Eight goats can be kept for what it costs to maintain one cow.

COMING BACK.
(Fairchild Observer.)

The prodigal sons are returning. Within the last week two men from the west have been in the Observer office looking for Wisconsin farm land. Both of them formerly owned good farms in Wisconsin and were prosperous, but they read the literature of the western land boomers telling of the fortunes to be made on the prairie land. They sold their holdings here and invested them in the west. Five and six years of experience has shown them their error. One of these men took $5,000 in cash with him besides a herd of full-blooded Holstein cattle, plenty of horses and farming implements and a lot of enthusiasm. The enthusiasm is gone entirely; the Holsteins went one by one to meet the demands caused by crop failures and the $5,000 has diminished to $3,000. The man is coming back to Wisconsin before the $3,000 has vanished. He wants to get those checks for milk coming with their old obligations, he wants to feel the money from 15 or 20 acres of potatoes in his pocket again, he wants to plant his crops with the old feeling of certainty that there will be a harvest time, and he wants the pleasure of cultivating and watching his crops grow instead of spending the time watching the clouds and praying for rain.

Turnips a Valuable Feed.

While an analysis does not find them rich in solid elements, their value lies in their appetizing and regulating properties. They furnish green substance for winter feeding, regulate the digestive organs and keep the stock in the best of health.

In feeding cows the trouble of which so many complain, namely, "stomach milk," has not been experienced. The turnips are cut up, so as not to choke the cow, and fed only as a part of the regular ration. Avoid feeding in excess and "treating" the cows at odd times.

Turnips may be profitably substituted for much high priced grain. In feeding sheep turnips are of especial value. They furnish the bulk and succulence so essential.

For hogs and poultry cooked turnips are relished much more. The slop is thickened with bran or shorts. To poultry it is fed as a warm mash in the evening and results are very good. Sometimes I cut a few turnips in two and throw them into the runs. Turnips are very good for young pigs, promoting growth and producing bone. They are also very good for brood sows and may constitute at least half of the ration. After farrowing they are fed in reduced quantities and seem to induce milk production—Farm and Home.

NEW APPLICANT FOR OFFICE

Wm. Kittle Places His Name Before the Public For State Superintendent.

William Kittle has placed his name before the public as state superintendent of schools. In speaking of Mr. Kittle's candidacy, Mr. H. S. Youker, formerly of this city, has the following to say:

Mr. Kittle is splendidly qualified for the office by education, by experience, and by natural endowments. He is a graduate of a state normal school and of our state university. He has had very successful experience as a teacher in country schools, graded schools, and high schools. For several years he was one of the successful city superintendents of this state. During the past seven years he has been secretary of the board of normal regents. In this capacity he has visited normal schools and public schools in various parts of the United States and was mainly instrumental in securing the introduction of courses for the training of teachers for the rural schools in our several state normal schools. He has also been a student of public affairs and has presented the results of his research in several of the leading magazines in this country. He is also a forceful public speaker. He has the personality and the qualities of leadership which will cause him to become a really great state superintendent.

In his platform he has outlined two great lines of work, first, the improvement of the rural schools; second, the promotion of industrial education. These ought to appeal to every one as the two greatest needs of education in Wisconsin at the present time. Active efforts along these lines will make the schools more largely serve the needs of the great masses of the people.

Mr. Kittle is an educator, not a politician. He has become a candidate in response to a call signed by the leading school men of the state as well as by prominent citizens of all political parties.

Wisconsin leads the other states of the Union along many lines. In education, according to the experts in education connected with the Russell Sage Foundation, rank twenty-ninth. Surely it is time for Wisconsin to wake up and displace the man who has now held the office of state superintendent for ten years and elect as his successor one who can by his constructive leadership, give to the schools of this state the efficiency and the rank they should have. Mr. Kittle is such a man and I earnestly invite your favorable consideration of his candidacy. Important as the office is, the average voter is apt to forget to vote. It is up to every one interested in education to remind others to vote on the election of state superintendent at the election next April. Do not forget to remind the woman that they ought to vote on this question.

Wood Stove Wanted.

The people at Riverview hospital report that they are in need of a cook stove for the laundry at the hospital and knowing that there are many articles of this kind owned by people who would be willing to donate such an article to the hospital, they take this method of letting the public know about their wants. There is no question but what some reader of the Tribune will be able to supply the want.

Roddis Co. Wins Suit.—Among the decisions handed down by the supreme court on Tuesday of this week was one in the case of Joseph Kug vs. the Roddis Lumber & Veneer Company of this city. The plaintiff was injured December 23rd, 1910 while working on a rip saw and through his attorneys Goggin & Brazee brought suit against the company for $10,000. The complaint showed, or attempted to show, that the company was at fault in several particulars and that the accident was due to their negligence. The case was tried in circuit court at Grand Rapids, January, 1912. Judge O'Neil of Neillville sitting for Judge Parks, the judge at the conclusion of the trial directing a verdict for the defendant company holding that the plaintiff had not made a case of negligence on the part of the defendant. The plaintiff appealed the case to the supreme court. On Tuesday of this week affirming Judge O'Neil's decision holding that on the plaintiff's own showing the Roddis company was not liable in damages for the accident.—Marshfield Herald.

Doped and Robbed.—Albert Schmidt cook in Camp 17 of the Connor Lumber company at Leona, six miles north of Wabeno, was picked up in Appleton by Officer Fox of the police force at about 11 o'clock Wednesday night. Schmidt was unconscious and unable to tell the story of how he came to Appleton on Tuesday night. Whether he was in a stupor as a result of being "doped" or whether he had fallen on the sidewalk and was injured could not be determined. Schmidt claimed he was robbed of $1,400 in cash at Green Bay Wednesday. He declared he sold a black fox to a dealer in Green Bay, receiving $1,200 for the fur, and had about $200 additional, all of which he says was stolen.

The charge against the young man was the killing of prairie chickens out of season. In this particular case the price of fowl was pretty high as he had killed but one and at the outside the bird could not have weighed two pounds.—Stevens Point Journal.

"Statistics Prove."

"Statistics prove," so many things: The size of towns, the height of kings, The age of children in the schools, The skill development of a fish, The salaries that parsons get, The number of abodes to let, The wealth of lucky millionaires, The price of hens and mining shares, All things below and things above, It seems to be, "statistics prove." But no, statistics never yet Appraised a single violet, Measured the glances of an eye, Or probed the sorrow of a sigh, Statistics never caught the gleam That dances on a meadow stream, Or weighed the anthem of a bird In forest aisles devoutly heard, Statistics never proved a soul, In high or low, in part or whole, Sin, beauty, passion, honor, love— How much statistics can not prove! —Amos R. Wells, in Life.
